At Christmastide

Long rows of crosses stand on Flander's plain,
Against the glorious gleam of Christmas dawn;
The sleepers rest from strive and piteous pain,
And in the starry skies the dream shines on.

This is the wondrous vision
Mary saw,
Alone in grief on Calvary's barren hill;

This is the dream fulfilled through Love's great law—
The light of "Peace on earth" that shineth still.

And tender now the mother-love will rest;
A song-soft voice will bless this Christmastide, To ease the ache of every bleeding breast
With "Yes, I know; for so my own Son died."

— Rosamond Livingstone
McNaught

This is a World War II poem, but it works well for many a cemetery with rows of crosses this Christmas.
Dedicated to all of our dear deceased, our soldiers, and all of those who have died in our wars.
"May perpetual light shine upon them."
